

Revised History

Whose Side is Fox News On?

By Al Benson    May 25, 2020

Martha McCallum on Fox News recently interviewed Richard Haas of the Council on Foreign Relations. While Haas was forced to admit that Red China's behavior regarding the virus it loosed on the world was pretty egregious, he nonetheless stopped way, way short of advocating that we stop dealing with them.

Our stopping any dealings with Red China would put a big dent in the globalist agenda the CFR has as its main project and so Haas said that we must now look for "new international organizations" that will assist us in dealing with Red China. That's a pile of bovine fertilizer.

So why is a commentator on Fox News interviewing the head of the CFR? Fox News shouldn't be having anything to do with the CFR.

In spite of having a handful of good, patriotic commentators on, such as Tucker Carlson and Sean Hannity, you have to start to wonder just whose side Fox News is really on.