

Revised History

Going In The Other Door

By Al Benson    October 12, 2020

Many, many years ago now, back when I was a teenager, they had a series on television called I Led Three Lives. It was based on Herbert Philbrick's experiences as an FBI operative infiltrating the Communist Party. Philbrick wrote a book with the same name about his infiltration of the Communist Party which I will, Lord willing, be commenting on shortly.

There was one episode in this television series that, for some reason, I did not forget. It showed a door to an office that was labeled "The Communist Party of America." During the show no one ever went near that door. But many people went into the door right next to that office that had the innocuous name of some company on it.

What people couldn't see from the hallway was that the office that had the name of this company on its door also had a connecting door from that office into the Communist Party office. Turns out that company office next to the Communist Party office was nothing but a front group for the Communist Party—a way for Communists to get into the Communist Party office without appearing to do so.

Today, such a tactic might be considered simplistic, but it may well have worked back in the 1950s. However, in our day, we still see a version of that in operation in regard to the upcoming election.

The Kamala Harris/Joe Biden ticket is vainly trying to tell us that they are going through the old-fashioned door of classical Democratic liberalism, when they are, in fact, going through the door of hardcore communism. We are not supposed to realize that one door inevitably leads to the other. Thanks to our dumbing down by academia and the "news" media, we are supposed to be too stupid to figure that all out.

Decades ago, the door to Democratic liberalism probably would not have led you into the office of hardcore communism. Such is not the case in our day. Today the door into supposed Democratic liberalism is nothing more than the door into a front group for leftist radicals trying to pose as moderates when they are anything but!

Kamala Harris is as far left as they come. You will note that I list her name in front of Biden's. That's because, due to Biden's mental deterioration, Harris is going to be the real president if the Democrats manage to steal the election, which they are working mightily on as I write.

In fact, I now wonder if all this recent buzz about the 25th Amendment is really all about Biden and not Trump as it was previously. Time was it was all about Trump if they could have gotten away with it. Now I think it is all about replacing Biden should the Democrats manage to gain the White House by fair means or foul (most likely foul). Should such a horrendous turn of events occur, I think Biden will be given a few weeks to appear to be president and then he will be replaced by Kamala Harris who is really going to be the one to accomplish what the hard left wants done to, not for, the country.

We live in "interesting" times, times I am afraid will never be "normal" again in our lifetimes. The radical leftists among us seem to feel that now is their time for communist revolution in this country. What remains to be seen is how far those that fund and promote their activities are willing to let them go.