Something Smells in Uvalde

By Al Benson May 31st, 2022

The recent shootings in a school in Uvalde, Texas have left a lot of unanswered questions. The more you look at it the more it smells like a classic Obama era false flag operation. If you recall, we had several shootings like this one when Obama was officially in office, and they all resulted in more strident demands for more strict gun controls. At that time Congress resisted most of what Obama wanted to do, but with the RINO-infested Congress we have now I can picture Obama, through his Biden puppet, getting what he wants in the gun control area. Lots of these guys talk conservative but when a vote comes up that will weaken your Second Amendment rights they will fade like last year's dead flowers.

An article on <https://www.naturalnews.com> for May 29th shows the false flag pattern for this latest shooting. The article by Ethan Huff observed: "The narrative surrounding the Uvalde, Texas false flag shooting is already crumbling apart as more revelations come to light about how police officers stood down and let the shooter rampage Robb Elementary School without even an attempt at intervention. We now know that a mother had to take matters into her own hands by secretly entering the school to save children, all while law enforcement stood outside and did nothing." The article stated further on that: "There is a lot wrong with this case starting way before the shooter even entered the school,' wrote a commenter. 'Every cop I know would have been in there saving those kids' lives. Something very fishy is going on here, and the point is always about gun control.'" How right he is—the point is always gun control—and that's the point in Uvalde too!

Another article for today, 5/31 on <https://www.lewrockwell.com> noted that: "Multiple reports have painted a disturbing picture of both incompetence and egregious decision-making, with over a dozen officers standing by while the shooter killed 19 children. Perhaps even worse, after a tactical team from the Border Patrol arrived, they were also told to stand down before eventually disobeying the order and neutralizing the threat. For their part, Texas DPS gave a presser that attempted to gloss over the failings, refusing to answer basic questions about what transpired. Now, unearthed documents are showing how protocols were violated in shocking ways, with the police response directly contradicting the expectations they were given just months prior in regards to an active shooter situation."

In other words, the police there had training earlier about how to handle this kind of situation...The instructions to officers aren't vague. They directly say that the first priority is to confront the killer immediately, neutralize them, and then render aid. Nowhere does it say to hang back for an hour waiting on a tactical team before then preventing said tactical team from entering. Further, it notes that while not waiting for backup, even a single officer is expected to do his duty..."

Another article on <https://flagandcross.com> stated, in part, that: "It is widely understood that responding officers are to immediately confront and engage an active shooter in a school—something that did not occur in Uvalde. This has many residents and parents abjectly furious and demanding answers."

So why did the cops stand down? And why did they try to prevent others from going in to help the kids? Until these questions are answered satisfactorily this still looks like yet another classic Obama era false flag event to promote more gun control, promoted by Obama's sock puppet who is his surrogate in the presidency. Obama's third term is proceeding according to plan.
